

- ▶ International stock markets were mixed with slight losses in Europe and relative stability in the U.S., as the economic calendar was light yesterday. In sovereign bond markets, yields decreased slightly especially in Europe.
- ▶ In Germany, industrial output unexpectedly shrank for a second consecutive month in October as it decreased by 1.4% month-on-month (September: -0.9%).
- ▶ In oil markets, oil price registered its largest decrease in two months as U.S. gasoline stockpiles expanded more than expected, offsetting a third weekly decline in crude inventories. As a consequence, the Brent closed just above 61 dollars a barrel.
- ▶ In the coming days, investors' attention will mainly focus on the U.S. job report for November that will be published on Friday.
