MONTHLY FACTSHEET JANUARY 2026

PORTFOLIO MANAGER

In January, BPI Alternative went up 5bps.

As in the previous two months, the Telecoms sector was again the main contributor with +51bps, due to our long in NOS and short in Telefonica. The European Telecoms sector had a good month and Telefonica lagged its peers. There continue to be rumors about Telefónica's interest in buying Vodafone Spain, and its parent company's (Zegona) share price continues to go up meaning that the operation is becoming potentially more expensive which will imply a higher capital increase to fund the deal. The European Commission published a draft revision that would require telecom companies to remove equipment from high-risk vendors, and Telefonica is quite exposed in Germany.

The second most relevant contribution came from Air exposed stocks with +15bps mainly due to the underperformance of our short Amadeus. Software companies' stocks around the globe are suffering pressure on fears that AI could disrupt its businesses and Amadeus was not an exception. We think that, for the time being, these concerns are overstated, and that Amadeus will continue to deliver solid results with solid FCF generation, which together with a solid balance sheet will probably mean that the company can launch a share buyback. After the correction, we changed from short to long as for the first time in several years we think that we can buy this quality stock at a good price. To balance this, we reverted IAG from long to short that is trading at least interesting valuation despite its good operational momentum.

The main detractor was the Utilities sector with -56bps mainly due to our positioning within Networks, specially because our long Redeia is being hurt with potential fines and compensations related with the April's 2025 blackout. Despite the already mentioned change of Amadeus/IAG, we reverted EDP to long and EDPR to short. At current prices, we believe that EDP's valuation ex-renewables is more interesting than peers considering good momentum in hydro generation and better than expected networks regulation in Portugal. We also turned Cellnex short vs other yield sensitive stocks as the current valuation is not interesting in the context of increasing M&A rumors in Telecoms across different geographies where Cellnex has an important presence such as Spain, France and Italy.
