

- ▶ Investors kicked off the week with a risk-on session driven by optimism that China and the U.S. will announce a trade deal as Trump and Xi Jinping are set to meet at a summit in South Korea. Global stocks advanced, with the S&P 500 hitting a new all-time high, and the Ibex-35 surpassing its 2007 record. The dollar weakened and gold prices fell below $4,100/ounce.
- ▶ Sovereign yields edged lower ahead of the Fed's and ECB's meetings. U.S. Treasury Secretary confirmed the nominees to replace J. Powell as Fed Chairman next year: current FOMC governors Christopher Waller and Michelle Bowman, former FOMC governor Kevin Warsh, White House Economic Council Director Kevin Hassett, and BlackRock executive Rick Rieder.
- ▶ In macro data, German business expectations improved in October (Ifo survey rose to 91.6 from 89.7).
- ▶ Elsewhere, Latin American stocks advanced, led by Argentinian equities (+21% in yesterday's session), following President Milei's party's victory in the legislative elections.
