

- Investors exhibited higher risk aversion in yesterday's session. Stocks declined across advanced and emerging economies in a movement led by the U.S., where Apple's cut to its sales outlook added to concern that global growth is slowing and dragged on all the major benchmark indices.
- In fixed income markets, U.S. 10-year sovereign yields dropped to their lowest level since January 2018 and the curve edged closer to inversion as the 10-year/3-month spread declined below 20bp. In the Eurozone, core sovereign yields were roughly stable but peripheral spreads ticked up as investors digested both the ECB's intervention of Italy's Banca Carige and Spain's first bond auction of the year.
- In FX markets, the euro fluctuated close to $1.14 and EM currencies exhibited a mixed performance against the USD.
- In oil markets, the barrel of Brent rose towards $56.
- In the U.S., the ISM Manufacturing index slid to 54.1 points in December. Although the indicator keeps signaling solid activity growth, its drop was unexpectedly large (November: 59.3) and the indicator reached its lowest level since end-2016.

Today the focus will be on the release of the U.S. December labour market report.
