

- In yesterday's session, investors traded with a positive mood amid better-than-expected economic data releases and deescalating comments from Iran and the U.S. More concretely, Trump said that Iran seemed to have stood down and that the U.S. would impose additional economic sanctions, which were not specified.
- In the data front, euro area economic sentiment rose in December to 101.5 points, from 101.2 in the previous month, while the U.S. ADP employment report showed that private payrolls increased by 202k jobs in December, from an upwardly revised 124k increase in November.
- In this context, stock indices and yields on sovereign bonds edged up in the euro area and in the U.S.
- In oil markets, the barrel of Brent fell below $66 (a 7% intraday drop after an opening spike above $70) supported not only by the U.S.-Iran comments but also on an increase in U.S. crude inventories.
